Here is an example of a narrative based on different pictures which might help you.

It was a warm autumnal morning; up above, the scorching sun played hide and seek with an array of marshmallow-like clouds. Angrily, the azure blue ocean smashed again and again against the defenceless golden shoreline. Gazing out at the picturesque horizon, a young girl - named Jemima - smiled at her best friend, Luke. Nearby, Jemima's father stared in wonder as a trio of smooth-skinned dolphins, galloping across the ocean like gazelles in the savannah. Gracefully, majestically, several iron-grey seagulls created a relentless squarking noise, reminiscent to tiny children in the playground.

Later on that morning, the two friends were having a lovely time in the warm water (warm like a bath), while Jemima's father set out an ornately decorated, gingham blanket for their lunch. Bringing out the lunch basket, Jemima's father created a mouthwatering aroma of freshly cooked burgers which lingered in the air like a welcome friend. "Jemima! Luke!" called Jemima's father, "How are you?" "Coming Dad!" replied Jemima, catching the ball expertly with two hands.

In the distance, an army of emerald green palm trees danced sedately in the morning breeze.
